Key messages

- The Department of Treaty, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Partnerships, Communities, and the Arts (the department) coordinates Community Recovery services to assist affected people including emotional support, personal financial hardship assistance and housing support.
- Community Recovery staff are currently assessing and responding to the needs of the affected community.
- People can choose how they access assistance to recover; online, over the phone or in person:
 - Online — the Community Recovery online portal (www.qld.gov.au/disasterhelp) allows people to apply for financial assistance and support services from personal devices at their own convenience (e.g., computer, smartphone or tablet).
 - Over the phone — the Community Recovery Hotline (Ph: 1800 173 349) will also offer to complete applications for financial assistance and support services over the phone.
 - In person — by visiting a local Community Recovery Hub (when open) or requesting an outreach visit to their home when it is safe to do so. COVID-19 safe practices as advised by Queensland Health will be applied.
- If required a Community Recovery Hub will be established and the location and hours of operation will be advised.
- The Department of Housing works closely with impacted councils to ensure options are available to support those who cannot return home after a disaster and provides Emergency Housing Assistance Response (EHAR) including identifying short-term accommodation to support vulnerable people in need.
- Non-government organisations (NGOs) are available to provide emotional wellbeing and support services such as counselling and charitable donation of goods and service. NGOs will refer those experiencing serious psychological issues to Queensland Health mental health practitioners.
- The department also provides interpreter services to assist people to access Community Recovery services who do not have English as their first language or are hearing-impaired.
- To donate money, goods or to receive assistance contact the following organisations: GIVIT, Australian Red Cross, The Salvation Army, St Vincent de Paul Society Queensland or UnitingCare (Lifeline).
- Follow Community Recovery on Facebook @RecoveryQld or visit the Community Recovery website www.qld.gov.au/disasterhelp
- The following grants have been activated:
 - Emergency Hardship Assistance: $180 per person (up to $900 for a family of five or more) for people who are unable to meet their immediate essential needs for temporary accommodation, food, essential clothing and medication.
 - Essential Household Contents: of up to $1,765 for individuals (up to $5,300 for a family) to eligible people who do not have the relevant insurance and have had damage to their homes and belongings as a result of the disaster and who meet the income threshold.
 - Structural Assistance: of up to $50,000 per household for people who are uninsured or unable to claim insurance as a contribution towards repairs to their home to make it secure and safe and who meet the income threshold.
 - Essential Services Safety and Reconnection Scheme: up to four essential service reconnections (e.g., electricity, gas, water or sewerage) at maximum $200 each and repair to damaged service items to a maximum total of $4,200.

*Eligibility Criteria applies. Please see pages 6-9 for further details.

Community Recovery service locations

Community Recovery online portal

The portal provides members of the public with the option of applying online for financial assistance and support services using their own internet-enabled devices (e.g., computer, smartphone, tablet). The portal is also able to determine an applicant's eligibility, verify their identity and transfer funds directly to their nominated bank account. The portal will be turned on and only visible to members of the public following a disaster when hardship assistance is activated by the Queensland Government. The web address for the portal is: www.qld.gov.au/communityrecovery

Community Recovery Hotline - 1800 173 349

People can call the hotline and be assessed for financial assistance and request support services over the phone.

Community Recovery Hubs

A hub is a physical location where the community can go to access a range of recovery information and services. Examples of assistance that may be available include:

- Financial support (e.g., personal financial hardship assistance, financial counselling or Centrelink income support)
- Housing support and services (emergency housing assistance and other housing support services)
- Offers of assistance (e.g., material goods and donations)
- Practical support services (e.g., access to advocacy and translation services)
- Information and referral (e.g., welfare referrals and other local services)
- Disaster-specific advice, (e.g., safe clean up, managing health concerns; how to cope and insurance advice).
- Emotional support (e.g., personal support, counselling and mental health services)
- Resources to assist vulnerable individuals and groups (e.g., young children and adolescents and domestic and family violence).

If required a Community Recovery Hub will be established and the location will be provided.

Outreach

Outreach visits are available for people who are unable to apply online, over the phone or attend a Community Recovery Hub.

Members of the public can make an appointment for a Community Recovery representative to visit them where they are living, to provide recovery assistance (e.g., access to financial assistance or referral to emotional wellbeing and support services).

To request an outreach visit, contact the Community Recovery Hotline on 1800 173 349.

Outreach visits will also be required to verify disaster impact and damage to support applications for the Essential Household Contents Grant, Structural Assistance Grant and Essential Services Safety and Reconnection Scheme grant.

Extra support and services available

Community Recovery updates

We will regularly broadcast updates on our services and how to access them on:

- Facebook handle @RecoveryQld
- local ABC radio stations
- notice boards at local gathering places (e.g., shops)
- the Community Recovery website www.qld.gov.au/disasterhelp
- the Queensland alerts website www.qld.gov.au/alerts for disaster alerts and updates
- the COVID-19 Queensland Government website www.covid19.qld.gov.au for information on the COVID-19 response.

SES Hotline (132 500)

The SES Hotline is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The hotline organises requests for assistance following a disaster, as well as information about how to become a volunteer and preparedness information and referrals.

Emergency Alert

Emergency Alert is the national telephone-based emergency warning system that sends disaster warning messages via:

- landlines based on the location of the handset.
- mobile phones based on an individual's billing address.
- Telstra mobile account holders based on the device's location.

If you receive an Emergency Alert and want more information, follow the instructions in the message. You do not need to register for this service.

Housing Services

Emergency Housing Assistance

The Department of Housing (DoH) can provide emergency housing assistance and other housing support services to people if their home is damaged from a disaster, and they are unable to live in the property.

The DoH provides Emergency Housing Assistance Response (EHAR), including identifying short-term accommodation to support vulnerable people in need.

People can access housing assistance online www.qld.gov.au/housing, over the phone 13 QGOV or in person at their nearest Housing Service Centre.

The department also works closely with:

- impacted councils to ensure options are available to support those who cannot return home after a disaster.
- retirement villages, residential services and manufactured home parks, community housing providers and specialist homelessness services to check on the welfare of their residents and condition of their property.

Psychosocial recovery

During a disaster it is common for community members to experience psychological distress.

Approximately 80 per cent of people affected by a disaster will recover with the provision of basic support, while the other 20 per cent may need ongoing wellbeing and emotional support.

Feelings and emotions

Fear, guilt, anger, uncertainty, sadness, grief and insecurity are normal reactions to a disaster however some people may experience deeper symptoms of stress, like difficulty sleeping, miscommunications, hypervigilance, increased family violence, increased use of alcohol and other drugs and low attendance at work and school.

People who experience these symptoms may benefit from a referral to emotional wellbeing and support services such as Psychological First Aid, information that explains what they are going through and/or counselling. During a disaster, specialist mental health clinicians from Queensland Health can refer individuals to support services if they appear to be experiencing acute stress reactions or heightened symptoms of pre-existing mental health disorders.

It is normal for people to experience a variety of reactions over time and for people to view the same event differently. Longitudinal studies suggest that post-disaster psychological symptoms reach their peak in the year following the disaster and then improve but in many cases, symptoms may persist for years. Some people will recover quickly while others may require support over a longer period of time.

Supporting mental health

Some people may develop new mental health conditions or experience a reoccurrence or exacerbation of an existing disorder in the weeks and months following an event. The number of people affected varies according to the severity and nature of the disaster and the extent of losses sustained.

Few individuals with disaster-related mental health disorders, especially with post-traumatic stress disorder, initiate contact with mental health treatment services, unless they've had prior experience with those services. People experiencing ongoing post-traumatic stress or depressive symptoms can be referred to public mental health services through Queensland Health for assessment. Community members should be encouraged to seek help if they or their children experience any of the above-mentioned symptoms.

In emergencies there are disruptions to family and community networks due to loss, displacement, family separation, community fears and distrust. Even when family and community networks remain intact, people in emergencies will benefit from help in accessing greater community and family supports. Psychosocial support is built on ensuring access to basic services, information, empowerment, community support, reconnection with family and friends, psychological and counselling services and specialised services.

Appropriate training for responders after a disaster is of paramount importance in order to avoid triggering survivors heightened suggestibility, the possibility of vicarious trauma and the risk of re-traumatising survivors through inappropriate support. Queensland Health clinicians can also assist responding field staff and volunteers with on the ground emotional support as required. Factsheets and other useful reference materials are also available – refer to the 'links and resources' section of this document.

More information

Insurance

After a disaster you should contact your insurer as soon as possible to find out what is covered on your policy and ask for advice on repairs and building work that is required at your property. Ensure you keep records and if possible, photos of any damage to property or contents. If you have difficulties with your insurance company, contact the Insurance Council Australia Ph: 1300 728 228. For more information visit www.qld.gov.au/community/disasters-emergencies/disasters/money-finance/insurance.

Property managers/owners and tenants should talk to each other as soon as possible to discuss the state of the property and work out if any action needs to be taken. The property manager/owner is responsible for any maintenance and repairs and the tenant is responsible for removing or cleaning their possessions. For more information contact Ph: 1300 366 311 or visit www.rta.qld.gov.au.

Cleaning your home after disaster

After a disaster ensure your home is safe and clean. For advice on how to clean your home after a disaster visit www.qld.gov.au/community/disasters-emergencies/disasters/rebuilding-cleaning.

Scams

Be aware that there are people who try to use disasters for their own gain. Fake charities and people posing as government officials have taken advantage of the public after past disasters. Do not supply your credit card details to these people. For more details visit www.qld.gov.au/law/laws-regulated-industries-and-accountability/queensland-laws-and-regulations/fair-trading-services-programs-and-resources/fair-trading-latest-news/disaster-assistance/charity-scams.

A free online check is available at the following link to see if you are donating to a legitimate charity: www.qld.gov.au/law/laws-regulated-industries-and-accountability/queensland-laws-and-regulations/check-a-licence-association-charity-or-register/check-a-charity-or-association.

Asbestos Removal

Material containing asbestos can be damaged during severe weather. Asbestos is dangerous when tiny fibres are inhaled. The fibres can lodge in your lungs and eventually cause disease. For urgent enquires contact Ph: 13 74 68 or for more information visit www.qld.gov.au/emergency/safety/asbestos.

Volunteering

Spontaneous volunteers are a vital and significant part of our community. They can provide valuable assistance at times of disasters as well as support preparedness and recovery activities. Volunteering Queensland through Emergency Volunteering CREW can help councils and organisations enhance their preparedness and capacity to manage spontaneous volunteers through recruitment and registration of offers to volunteer, matching volunteers with organisations, training and sector development, development of standard operating procedures, resilience building, information and advice. For more details visit www.volunteeringqld.org.au.
